

Women and Children First: How One Nonprofit Invests in Child Care and Gets Women Working

January 19, 2012

9:00 – 11:00 am

The Yale Club of New York City
50 Vanderbilt Avenue
New York, NY 10017

All Our Kin, a groundbreaking Connecticut-based nonprofit, has responded to the economic downturn by investing in the community's women, empowering them with the resources and training they need to open their own family child care programs.

A new study by the University of Connecticut's Center for Economic Analysis demonstrates that All Our Kin's Family Child Care Tool Kit Licensing Program serves as an important workforce development support for low-income families and generates substantial tax revenue and macroeconomic benefits. For every $1 dollar spent on the family child care training program, there is a $15-20 return in terms of gross regional product (GRP).

Join economists and policy experts as we discuss how this community development model puts our most vulnerable infants and toddlers on a path to success in school and life, gives low-income parents the support they need to work, and improves the economy.

This event is free. Please RSVP to Shannon at shannon@allourkin.org or 203.772.2294.

Sponsored by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, Arbor Brothers, Ms. Foundation for Women, National Council for Research on Women, and New York University McSilver Institute for Poverty Policy and Research.

SPEAKERS:

HELEN BLANK, MA

Director of Leadership & Public Policy
National Women's Law Center

SHYAMA VENKATESWAR, PHD

Director of Research & Programs
The National Council for Research on Women

FRED CARSTENSEN, PHD

Director of the Connecticut Center for Economic Analysis

JESSICA SAGER, JD

Executive Director
All Our Kin